Mr. Smith has more than 17 years of experience in legal technology—first beginning to identify and deploy legal technologies as a legal assistant, system administrator, and legal technology consultant in undergrad.

Currently, Mr. Smith is a Missouri and Kansas licensed trial attorney practicing primarily in the areas of employment and disability discrimination, governmental liability, catastrophic personal injury, wrongful death, insurance defense, business and commercial litigation, and eDiscovery. He aggressively defends the rights of clients in high-stakes litigation and decisively leverages cutting-edge trial technology in the courtroom. Mr. Smith has been selected to Super Lawyers Rising Star list for the last six years running in the area of Civil Litigation.

Additionally, Mr. Smith is a legal technology and eDiscovery consultant to various other attorneys and law firms, and he has been teaching CLEs on such subjects since 2008.

No. Pursuant to § 1.470.1 RSMo, a law enforcement agency is only violate SAPA when they employ a previous federal agent, official, employee, or deputy that enforced infringements in the state of Missouri after SAPA was adopted. Here, the deputy has not enforced infringements after SAPA was adopted and your Department is not subject to a SAPA fine.

For drug task force participation, we suggest a Memorandum of Understanding that the deputy will not be expected or required to violate SAPA and that they will discontinue participation on any investigation or arrest as soon as it becomes apparent that only federal gun laws will not be involved.
